

3 Ways to Get Your Neighborhood Involved on Earth Day

Host a Trash Pickup Event

Keeping our neighborhoods clean takes teamwork and a collective drive. Even when we're careful, litter can end up in our gutters and on our sidewalks. Take a few minutes on Earth Day to do a quick trash sweep in front of your house and reach out to a neighbor who might need help cleaning up in front of their house. A community effort makes for a clean neighborhood.

Educate Your Neighbors About Recycling

Earth Day is a great day to refresh your recycling chops and then pass that knowledge along to your neighbors. Use the materials on RecyclingSimplified.com to learn what's recyclable and how to prepare your recyclables for pickup. Since contamination can divert a whole truckload to the landfill, educating your neighbors ensures your recycling efforts don't go to waste.

Plan a Nature Scavenger Hunt

Make a list of things you might find in your neighborhood – a green car, a blue recycling cart, a maple leaf, for example. Then take that list out on a nature walk and find those items. This Earth Day pay close attention to all the beauty the outdoors has to offer. Invest time and energy in ways to care for the planet.

Visit RepublicServices.com/EarthDay for more information about recycling, as well as additional resources for Earth Day.

